Corey Omer is an associate in Sullivan & Cromwell LLP's Litigation Group. Mr. Omer's practice focuses on representing clients in complex civil litigation, white collar and regulatory investigations, and cybersecurity matters. Mr. Omer also represents and advises clients with respect to insurance matters.

Mr. Omer has advised clients on responding to data breaches and cyber fraud, including issues relating to unauthorized access to customers' personal data, communications with regulatory authorities and law enforcement, and cyber insurance coverage. He has also advised clients on cybersecurity governance, cyber-related policies and incident response plans, and issues relating to the EU General Data Protection Regulation in the context of U.S. civil litigation and investigations.

Mr. Omer is co-chair of the New York State Bar Association's International Data Privacy and Data Protection Committee, and his pro bono work includes representing indigent criminal defendants in federal court and the victims of domestic violence and consumer fraud.

Mr. Omer graduated from the McGill University Faculty of Law (B.C.L./LL.B.) in 2012. Prior to joining Sullivan & Cromwell, Mr. Omer clerked for the Honourable Morris J. Fish at the Supreme Court of Canada and obtained a Master of Laws (LL.M.) from Harvard Law School. He is admitted to practice law in New York, Ontario, and Quebec.

In May 2018, Mr. Omer was presented with the Burton Awards for Legal Achievement's Law360 Distinguished Legal Writing Award – Law Firm in recognition of an article he co-authored entitled "The Constitutionality of State Cybersecurity Regulations."
