Dear Wakabayashi-Sensei:

During this trying time for all, I want to extend my sincere best wishes of good health to you and your colleagues at the Dai-Ichi Tokyo Bar Association. We are grateful that we were able to come together only four short months ago to support our joint efforts of collaboration through our signing of a memorandum of understanding.

The COVID-19 pandemic has been unlike any we have ever seen. It has traversed the world in just 100 days, leaving hardship and suffering in its path. While the crisis brings deep concerns for our health and ways of life, it has provided the organized bar with a unique opportunity and responsibility to serve the legal profession and public like never before. It will not hold us back from actively helping our friends and neighbors, such as the Dai-Ichi Tokyo Bar Association.

We look forward to launching our joint projects when this crisis subsides and wish you good health until we meet again.

All the best to you, your members and your great country.

Sincerely,

Henry M. Greenberg
