Verdicts, Perception & Perspective: Trends for Success and Civility in the Law

In an era dominated by heightened social media attention, multi-million-dollar "nuclear verdicts" have transformed trial practice. While the defense bar strives to prevent runaway jury awards, plaintiffs' attorneys must navigate zealously optimizing a plaintiff's verdict and simultaneously managing client expectations. We will examine the psychological and mechanical drivers behind outlier verdicts, actionable techniques for counsel on both sides of the "v" and communication aligned with civility in the law.

LLMs, Lawsuits, and Liquidity: Detecting the Effects of Personal Injury Advertising in Crowdfunding Narratives

We use large language models to extract legal context and liquidity needs from millions of private crowdfunding narratives, then combine these measures with geographic variation in personal injury lawyer advertising. The results show how AI can recover economically meaningful outcomes from unstructured text and reveal how engagement with the legal system interacts with households' short-term financial needs.

Mastering Strategies & Advocacy in Mediation Nashville Style

Mediation is more than simply showing up at the table - it's an opportunity to advocate strategically, navigate challenging dynamics, and position your client for the best possible outcome. This practical and engaging session will explore proven strategies for effective mediation advocacy, from preparation and negotiation to communicating with mediators, managing expectations, resolving disputes, and documenting the final agreement.

Attendees will gain practical insights into handling difficult conversations, navigating emotional dynamics, and communicating with clarity, confidence, and purpose. The program will also take a closer look at the ethical responsibilities that come with effective mediation advocacy, including the importance of professionalism, fair dealing, and responsible communication throughout the process. Participants will leave with practical tools and techniques they can put to work immediately in their next mediation.

The Impact of Accident Analysis and Injury Biomechanics

This program will provide attorneys with a practical understanding of accident analysis and injury biomechanics and how these disciplines can be used to evaluate injury claims and liability. Faculty will explore the mechanics of motor vehicle crashes, injury causation and biomechanics, including whiplash and spinal injuries, as well as accident data, Event Data Recorders (EDRs), and evidence from crash investigations. The program will also address trip-and-fall, slip-and-fall, falling-object, occupational, and premises liability cases, including situations where a claimant's account may not be consistent with the physical evidence.

The program will also examine head injuries, human factors, witness reliability, evidence collection and chain of custody, and the presentation of accident evidence at trial. Attendees will gain practical insight into working with and challenging expert witnesses, including evaluating expert testimony, admissibility issues, and how accident analysis and biomechanics can be used to support or challenge arguments regarding injury and liability.

The Settlement Decision in the Shadow of Trial—
Managing Risk, Resolving Cases, and Confronting the Nuclear-Verdict Reality

This program will address the increasing risk of exceptional jury awards; the steps lawyers, carriers, and parties can take throughout discovery, motion practice, and pretrial proceedings to reduce that risk; and the circumstances in which even thoughtful preparation and serious settlement efforts cannot eliminate it. Attendees will leave with a practical framework for deciding when to continue negotiating, when to recalibrate settlement expectations, and when a case must be tried with a clear-eyed understanding of the potential consequences.

Redefining Advocacy Skills for Today's Juries

Attorneys are not trained to think like jurors, and today's juries do not decide cases the way that lawyers and judges often assume they do. As a result, attorneys may view juries as unpredictable, misjudge case value, or present cases in ways that fail to resonate with jurors. This program examines the psychology of jury decision-making and the evolving advocacy skills lawyers need to effectively and ethically select juries, counsel clients, conduct voir dire, and present their cases. Participants will explore how behavioral science can be used consistently with the Rules of Professional Conduct, with particular emphasis on competence, candor, fairness to the tribunal, ethical client counseling, and the responsible use of jury research. Among the topics covered are:

- Developing the jury story through creative discovery and ethical jury research
- Controlling the focus of the case by framing the issues ethically and without misleading jurors
- Building credibility through an investigative rather than an adversarial approach, emphasizing candor and professional responsibility
- Building rapport and obtaining juror information ethically during voir dire
- Creating context for client conduct and decision-making while counseling clients ethically using jury psychology and behavioral research
- Creating better case positioning for mediation through ethical client counseling and realistic case evaluation

- Simplifying and telling a better case story while maintaining fairness and candor to the tribunal
- Persuasion and presentation skills that communicate meaning without appealing to bias or misleading the jury
- New research and ethical strategies for presenting damages evidence and arguments
- The ethical use of behavioral science, jury research, and emerging technologies in trial practice

Observations from the Bench and Advice from The Advocate

Join Justices James E. d'Auguste, James G. Clynes, and Brendan T. Lantry for an interactive discussion moderated by Michelle Kern-Rappy Esq. on effective advocacy, trial preparation and mediation. Attendees will have the opportunity to ask questions and engage directly with the panelists on issues that arise in everyday practice.

Drawing on their experience from the bench, the panel will discuss what judges find most persuasive in written submissions and oral argument, common pitfalls encountered by litigators, and the advocacy approaches that build credibility with the court. The discussion will also explore the relationship between trial readiness and obtaining favorable litigation outcomes.
