Call for Submissions – International Law Practicum

Special Issue: Artificial Intelligence Regulation Across Jurisdictions

The New York State Bar Association International Section invites submissions for the upcoming issue of the International Law Practicum, focusing on the regulation and governance of artificial intelligence and the legal developments emerging across jurisdictions.

About This Issue

The International Law Practicum publishes peer-reviewed articles emphasizing the practical application of international law and cross-border legal practice. For this issue, we particularly welcome jurisdiction-specific and comparative analyses of recent legislative, regulatory, enforcement, or judicial developments. Priority will be given to articles that offer actionable insights for practitioners, discuss recent developments, or address emerging issues affecting international legal practice.

Suggested Topics

Topics may include, among others:

- National and regional AI regulatory frameworks
- Comparative approaches to AI regulation
- AI governance, risk management, and compliance
- Generative AI and foundation models
- AI-related litigation and regulatory enforcement
- AI and intellectual property
- AI in financial services, employment, immigration, and other regulated industries
- Cross-border data transfers, privacy, and AI
- Export controls, sanctions, and trade measures affecting AI
- AI in international arbitration and dispute resolution
- Professional responsibility and the use of AI in legal practice

Submission Guidelines

- Articles should generally run 750 to 3,000 words. These are guidelines rather than firm limits.
- Submissions should focus on practical developments and their implications rather than purely academic or theoretical discussion.
- Authors should review the NYSBA Publication Author Policies and Guidelines before submitting.
- Submission does not guarantee publication. Due to length limitations, the Editorial Board reserves the right to edit, shorten, defer, combine, or decline submissions to maintain thematic balance and meet publication requirements.

Key Dates

- Submission deadline: Tuesday, December 15, 2026
- Expected publication: January 2027
